

The MGH Center for
Cross-Cultural Student
Emotional Wellness

Rethinking Success in High School

A Special Event Sponsored by the TJ PTSA

Featuring the

Massachusetts General Hospital Center for Cross-Cultural Student Emotional Wellness

Led by TJ Alumnus Justin Chen, MD

Artwork by LA Johnson/NPR

Are you a parent concerned about the pressures you may be placing on your child? Do you ever suspect you are doing more harm than good? Are you a frustrated student being pulled in every direction? Are you an educator who sees these students struggling with cultural expectations rather than learning for the sake of learning? If you answered yes to any of these questions, please attend our forum presented by a team of experts with personal and professional experiences in mental wellness. Learn how to talk to one another about these sensitive issues and rethink how we address success, stress and emotional wellness in high school.

When: Saturday, March 4, 2017, 2:00 - 5:00 pm

Where: TJ, Lecture Hall (2nd Floor)

6560 Braddock Road, Alexandria, VA, 22312

Refreshment will be provided.

This event is open to TJ and non-TJ students, parents, teachers, counselors and community members. All are welcome!

There is no cost to attend this event, however registration is required:

Register Here

In the message field, please indicate your role (e.g., parent, teacher, counselor or student). For students, please indicate grade and school.